The European Parliament had drafted it with one meaning; and the Commission with another, the final result being neutral. Advocate General Wathelet gave an emphatic opinion in favour of recognising same-sex marriages. He noted that it is a basic principle of EU law that, contrary express provision otherwise, language should have uniform meaning.

EU Equality Law and Precarious Work

In the early days, a choice was made not to entrust the EU with competences allowing it to protect against violations of fundamental rights per se. This task was placed in the hands of the Council of Europe. Although this choice has not been called into question, the EU has developed a broad range of instruments to respond to the impact of its activities on fundamental rights and a mechanism ...
