For almost every part, studying for a half yearly block is functionally the same to any exam period. You should go over your notes as much as possible (for applicable subjects), and be completing as many past papers as you can possibly do. The balance between notes and papers is something you should decide for yourself.

Half Yearly Exams - ATAR Notes

I found that if I had to, I'd just open up half yearly or trial papers and just do the questions from relevant topics only (I mean, THSC has HEAPS of papers so you don't run out of questions that easily). Especially because of the keyword - topics. Not every school will teach the topics in the same order you are.
